

Training Needs Analysis

Training is an important investment. It can deliver significant results – but how can you be sure you are sending your budget wisely?

When training fails to generate the required results, very often the fault originates in how the needs were initially identified.

Well-conducted “training needs analysis” ensures that needs are identified correctly so that you do not waste money and resources trying to solve the wrong problems.

We will work with you systematically to identify training needs at:

- an organisational level
- a team level
- an individual level

in a way that supports the corporate strategy and takes into account the current and future needs of the business and the individuals within it.

From this process you will create a training and development strategy for your organisation and each employee will have a personal learning plan.

If you would like to find out more call Lynne on 01494 451681 or e-mail us at enquiries@hratraining.co.uk